Textile artist Sarah K Jackson

Upcoming Events:

Several planned exhibitions that I was part of were postponed and the monthly Hovingham Market is on hold for the moment.

Other exhibitions that I'm part of that will hopefully run are:

14th & 15th November

York Textile Artists exhibition in The Cemetery Chapel in York Cemetery (YO10 5AJ). From 10am to 4pm.

Nov & Dec (TBC)

Diverse Threads exhibition at Nunnington Hall in North Yorkshire. More details nearer the time.

Managing change

What very strange - and at time challenging - few months we have experienced. How are you? I do hope that you and your loved ones have kept safe and well, and that this continues.

One of my new stitched pieces (above) returns to my love of nursery rhymes and reflects their ability to help us process life-changing events.

Missing group meetings

Like you, I suspect, I have really missed spending time with friends and the groups I belong to: Zoom meetings are just not the same as meeting up face-to-face, I'm sure you'd agree!

Competition time

See the Home page of my website for a chance to win some handmade face masks. <https://www.winifredtaylor.com>

New things

As part of this year's 'virtual' York Open Studios I developed a set of stitched paper chicken pictures that link with my 'Headstrong' series of work. I was particularly taken with the Silver-Laced Polish chicken that has this amazing crest - like a bouffant hair-do!

I was able to promote my work through my new Instagram profile. Lockdown enabled me to learn that skill as well as to set up my new online shop which you can see via the Shop menu on my website. Take care.....
